

Bob Blayone

My name is Bob Blayone. I'm a husband of thirty years to my best friend Dana, father of two, uncle to forty, brother to eight and friend to many. I'm a proud Albertan of diverse ancestry. I'm Metis and have ancestral roots that run deep, with my fourth Great Grandfather being Chief Black Powder, a strong leader of his time. Someone who also opposed the tyranny of men.

I'm from humble beginnings and was taught the value of hard work and self determination; that I was responsible for my own destiny. Through opportunity provided to me by our wonderful province, and through hard work and commitment - prosperity was found. I long to see those stolen opportunities returned to the people of Alberta, so that future generations may also reap the rewards of hard work and determination.

For far too long while we've been raising our families, earning a living, and living our lives, self-serving politicians have taken advantage of the people whom they serve. The fact that they rule over the people with a heavy hand has lit a fire within me. There are no longer meaningful checks and balances of power nor accountability in politicians, political parties, governments or in bureaucratic institutions.

My goal is to see Albertans standing in unity, creating a political movement of the people, and taking back what was stolen from us - our rights, freedoms and opportunities. Through Independence, we have the opportunity to flip over the table, to begin again, and to live freely once again.

Freedom through Independence. Together this is possible! And the Alberta Unity Project is the pathway to reaching those goals.
